1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem or issue that needs to be addressed. This involves gathering information and understanding the context of the situation.

2. Once the problem is identified, the next step is to define the objectives and goals of the project. This helps to clarify what needs to be achieved and provides a clear direction for the team.

3. The third step is to develop a plan or strategy to address the problem. This involves breaking down the problem into smaller, manageable tasks and determining the resources and timeline needed to complete them.

4. The fourth step is to implement the plan. This involves putting the strategy into action and monitoring progress regularly to ensure that the project is on track.

5. The final step is to evaluate the results of the project. This involves comparing the actual outcomes with the objectives and goals to determine the effectiveness of the project and identify areas for improvement.

The Chicago Tribune, in its issue of January 1, 1911, published a long and elaborate article on the subject of the "Chicago School of Management." The article was written by a man named "Theodore Tilton," who was then a student at the University of Chicago. The article was a satire on the "Chicago School of Management," which was a group of men who were known for their "scientific" approach to management. The article was a very clever and witty piece of writing, and it was very popular. It was a very good example of the "Chicago School of Management" style of writing.

Boelens Ford Ordered Campaign Against Jews to Further His Candidacy for President.

Mr. Ford explained that he went several months ago to England on a magazine article assigned by The Dearborn Independent as a subject in which the Jewish Service was interested, and that Mr. Ford repudiated one of his charges, warning him that nothing would be published in the future without his prior approval. Ford, according to the column, Mr. Ford told him that he had been treating a "good investigator" of the anti-Semitic movement, that he had been surprised at the results, made by his paper, that he was for the Jews and had sympathy in his country, and that he would stop the campaign and that in return he had done.

Mr. Paine in his statement said: "Several months ago, The Pearson Independent published an article to which my department was interested. At my first opportunity, I took this up with Harry Bennett, chief of the Ford secret service, whom I have known for a number of years, and called his attention to a number of inaccuracies. When I questioned him as to where he got such information, he made it very plain indeed that his department had nothing to do with gathering it; that it had been handled entirely by the organization of the Independent

"I then asked him if the same thing was true in regard to the Jewish articles and he said that it was. That the Ford secret service had nothing to do with them. Then he further surprised me by saying that Mr. Ford was really an admirer of the Jews.

'He regards them as an essential event,' he said.

"Subsequent to my talk with Bennett, we called on Mr. Ford, and took up with him the article in which I was interested. He promptly called in one of the editors of the magazine and told him that in the future, nothing was to be printed unless the paper had full proof in its possession.

"I told my policy is to print only the truth; that this paper was to be a medium of instruction and not of destruction," he said.

"After some further conversation, mention was made of the articles on the Jews. Mr. Ford said that several months he had been making a quiet investigation and was really surprised at some of the statements that had been made in the Independent. I have known Mr. Ford for a number of years, and I could scarcely be really full heart at the foreman's life career and discussion.

"In view of that fact, I felt that I could open the subject further. I told him that I was particularly pleased at what he said because I came from New York where as large a percentage of the population was Jewish and where I had abundant opportunity to observe not only the feelings of the Jew toward him, but also the Jew as a citizen. Being a kindhearted man, he was very kind. I was the only thing that he seemed to be very much interested in, and he was very kind to me."

"I was so pleased that I fully understood, as cannot any other human being, or I made the migration the first time, in the first place, I was so pleased to help him, I said, 'Go to it.' He said, 'I know how to do it. It's a fair and honest thing to do. When my real views are explained to the proper people, they will know that I'm prepared not to humiliate this nation as we do as I am able, to repeat as often as I have done.'"

Mr. Palmer said that he then got together with Earl J. Davis of Detroit and through him, with Louis Marshall

Discussing the comment made in some quarters that Mr. Ford's apology was a step toward the 1981 Presidential nomination, Mr. Stupp says: "When Ford first launched the attack on the Jews he was a candidate for the Presidency of the United States, firmly so, in his own mind. He figured that the prejudice in the small communities throughout the United States was so strong against the Jews that he would gather three, four or five votes there for a Jewish vote he would lose."

Mr. Pipp declares that Mr. Cassion wrote the anti-Jewish article and because he believed what he wrote but in please Ford, to reflect Ford's views. As to Mr. Ford's motive in making his apology, Mr. Pipp continues:

"Henry Ford loves money, he loves power, he loves leadership. He lives in the first in everything. Ford for years encouraged Chamberlain in the work of vengeance. Now that he was the effect of it on himself as well as on others he repudiates Chamberlain and his works, works modeled after Ford's patterns. I will not say the spirit is not contrite. I will not say that he has not been overpowered by the awfulness of that which had been done in his name. I will not say that he is sorry for Chamberlain's crimes. You will have to judge that for yourself."

The man with whom Edgard negotiated for a $1,000,000 loan was, according to the Telegraphic Agency, was a resident of New York.
Although Edgard was favorable to the idea of the loan, he was not in the position to make the loan.
The loan was made by the American Bank of New York.
The loan was made for the purpose of financing the construction of the New York City
subway system.

Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, included the following: Underhille Zettling. "The man who was compelled to abandon his duties and now is getting into borrowed opinions."

Harriet Taggart. "Only a chance one saw Ford in an unrepresentative Taggart, urged the free itself from Jewish capital and the Jewish."

What Federal Judge Raymond Considers 'Contempt of Court'

IN AN EFFORT TO PERMIT AN ACCUSED woman to explain her side of a case that had attracted wide public attention, The Detroit Times interviewed Mrs. Cora Hoffman a tutor in the Sapero-Ford trial last Tuesday after wide circulation of charges against her as a tutor.

Because of the publication of her defense in these pages, Judge Raymond publicly rebuked the Times, stating that the publication of proceedings started by this newspaper.

Below is the interview reported from The Detroit Times so that readers may know what the court considers contempt.

It has been a rule of the Times for years not to print charges against anyone, especially charges involving a woman's reputation, without first attempting to get the accused person's answer to these accusations, in order that there may be simultaneous publication of both sides of the controversy.

Here is the interview:

(From last Tuesday's Times)

MRS. HOFFMAN, questioned by newspaper men in her home at 3154 Fourteenth avenue, admitted that she had been grilled by Judge Raymond regarding charges that she had tutored the woman whose body was found in the trunk of the car.

"I told the judge that I did recall meeting a strange woman in the hall and merely granting her request to let her use the rest room. I do not know the woman."

Mrs. Hoffman then admitted she had been questioned regarding her conversation about the woman's body with J. Miller of the Westchester company, who she said is a real estate agent.

At last the judge that I had talked with Miller several times about calling a flat owned by my husband and myself, but I never discussed the Ford-Sapero trial with him.

At a point in the trial the judge told me to quit hanging around the court room and pointing me out to get out and tell the apartment house.

"Before I was called on this point, I had never heard of Sapero and I knew nothing about Mr. Ford's matters. I did not even know the first day I went to court that it was the matter coming up."

"I've never before done any kind of any sort of work with a woman and I would give a willing witness against Ford on matter with many weeks of testimony I had to him. I've worked my hands out to tell to the about the case."

Later Mrs. Hoffman told newspaper men that "I told to him in a private place that I was trying to get him out of court. I was also telling him of court. I was also telling him that the judge had been rebuked by the judge."

TRIAL POSSIBLE

There was a possibility that the investigation would result in a trial being declared. On the other hand, the charges might be dismissed and the trial dropped with only 17 jurors.

Laron Rogers, the so-called co-operative king, was sued Ford for $1,000,000 damage was in no way connected with the incident, according to information obtained by the writer.

The charges were laid before the court last yesterday by Ford's attorneys after the trial had been of several hours of the story of the case.

The Ford attorneys had said in their briefs that the charges were a libel on the part of the Times. The charges were a libel on the part of the Times. The charges were a libel on the part of the Times. The charges were a libel on the part of the Times.

JUDGE IN CONFERENCE

It was learned the judge had an hour's conference with the jury last night in his chambers at the Federal Building. The jury was brought to the court house by Deputy U. S. Marshal George Hennessey and arrived at the Department of Justice. Following this conference, the judge said he was investigating a matter connected with the case, but declined to give any other details. The jury was said to have heard the case for the last time and entered a further inquiry before reaching a verdict.

The trial will continue until the jury reaches a verdict.

Some of the details of the case were concluded on next page, Col. 8.

newspaperman. This he said was sufficient to disqualify her as a juror.

Appeared in a separate affidavit, where he stated that Miller and never discussed the trial while the hearing of a jury. He declared it was evident to defendant's counsel that their defense had collapsed and that something had to be done to prevent the trial. He stated that he and the defendant were going to prevent the trial from going on.

"Important believe, Kaelin concluded, that defendant's counsel has been using every means to delay or prevent the personal appearance of Henry Ford for examination before this court, and that the affidavits filed in this cause by the detectives attached to defendant's staff, were made and framed in a desperate attempt to accomplish that purpose and to secure grounds for a mistrial and thereby exhaust the resources of this department and defer or prevent the necessity for the appearance of Henry Ford."

On this occasion deponent pointed out this man and called him to the attention of Carl Knecht, John Smolar, Joseph Dorman and Joseph Clemen, who were working under the supervision of deponent.

They greeted each other in a friendly manner and then they all stood about each other. The said Miller and the said Sapiro walked down the corridor together, conversing and at the end of the hallway adjacent to the court room they shook hands with each other and parted.

In the afternoon of said day the said Miller was again in attendance at the trial of said cause and this deponent saw him shake hands and engage in conversation with Corn Nostra, one of the jurors sitting in said case, who at that time was well known by sight to this deponent. This deponent did not hear the conversation between them.

Sapiro, in a separate affidavit, sworn to never met Miller and never discussed the trial within the hearing of a juror. He declared it was "evident to defend who cannot that their defense had collapsed and that something had to be done to prevent the further course of this trial and to prevent the jury from acting here under any circumstances."

"Defendant believes Sapiro concluded, 'That defendant's counsel has been using every means to delay or prevent the personal appearance of Henry Ford for examination before this court, and that the affidavits filed in this case by the detective attached to defendant's staff, were made and framed in a desperate attempt to accomplish that purpose and to secure grounds for a mistrial and thereby exhaust the resources of this department and delay or prevent the recovery for the apprehension of Henry Ford.'"

MOTION FILED

The Ford motion for a mistrial reads as follows:

"Now come the above mentioned defendants with a motion that a mistrial be declared for the following reasons:

"1. Cora Hoffman, one of the jurors impeached, falsely testified to conversations taking place between said conversations taking place about 11 a. m. during a recess period, and the second about 12:30 p. m. when the noon recess was over. One of these men whose name at that time was not known to defendant, but whose identity is affirmed and believed to be known as 'Kid' Miller, was a man appearing to be from 15 to 20 years of age, about 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighing in the neighborhood of 150 pounds, was bald headed, and was wearing a dark gray overcoat and a dark green hat. On this occasion defendant pointed out this man and called him to the attention of Carl Brocka, Joseph Starin, Joseph Linnan and Joseph Clements, who were working under the supervision of defendant."

"On Wednesday, March 28, 1927, defendant, in company with said Brocka, saw these same three men above referred to loitering about the corridors of the third floor of the Post Office Building in the vicinity of the court room where said court was being tried, from 10 a. m. until 1:30 p. m. when court adjourned for the noon recess. At the recess interval, in the corridor adjacent to the court room, the said 'Kid' Miller approached the said Cora Hoffman, lifted his hat, spoke to her by name and shook hands with her. They then began to hold a conversation and the said Miller requested the said Cora Hoffman to go to dinner with him; she declined and he remarked, 'You can make several thousand dollars if you will do that.' She shook her head and started to walk away. He then took hold of her arm and they continued their conversation in a low tone of voice so that no person was unable to hear the conversation. She then looked about her about hands with Miller and said to him, 'I'll see you later.' He replied, 'All right, and bet, in company with his two associates above mentioned."

"Defendant states that on Thursday, March 29, 1927, about 10:30 a. m. the court took a recess until afternoon and as soon as the recess was taken the said Miller waited up to the said Sapiro as the latter was leaving the court room, greeted him, and, putting their arms around each other, they conversed in a friendly and cordial manner in such a way that this defendant was not able to overhear it, and that the conversation took place in the corridor, where they were seated."

"On Monday, March 28, 1927, the said Miller was taken to the corridor adjacent to the court room and during the afternoon recess the said Miller and the said Sapiro bowed to each other, but no conversation took place between them at that time. At the adjournment of court, at the trial of said case, said defendant observed these men of Jewish race of consequence talking together and when the jurors left the court room one of these men, whose defendant has since been identified and believed the fact to be known as 'Kid' Miller, left his companions and approached the said Cora Hoffman and walked past defendant; upon it heard Miller say Mrs. Hoffman to go to dinner with him. Mrs. Hoffman appeared to clear away from Miller, saying that a man was following her. Miller said to her, 'It will be worth thousands of dollars to you if you will do that.' The said Cora Hoffman did not go with Miller, but returned to the jury room. The said Miller then joined his companions and left the corridor."

"The said Miller appeared to be about 25 to 30 years of age, weight about 150 to 160 pounds, and about 5 feet 7 inches in height."

"Carl Brocka, a former city detective, also was in conversation with the alleged Miller after the court adjourned to part, at which time the said Miller said to Brocka, 'I'll see you later.'"

"On the 29th day of March, 1927, the defendant of this case was called by Sapiro to a certain room, identified by him as 50 years of age, weighing about 150 to 160

Frank R. Hoffman, one of the jurors impeached, testified to conversations taking place between said conversations taking place about 11 a. m. during a recess period, and the second about 12:30 p. m. when the noon recess was over. One of these men whose name at that time was not known to defendant, but whose identity is affirmed and believed to be known as 'Kid' Miller, was a man appearing to be from 15 to 20 years of age, about 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighing in the neighborhood of 150 pounds, was bald headed, and was wearing a dark gray overcoat and a dark green hat. by stating that he had already advised the court that there was nothing in the affidavits which he had presented which had any tendency to involve either Mr. Shapiro or any of his counsel in the matter under consideration and he wanted to know that he had given the court that assurance, and that their own construction of the matter was that Miller was an unscrupulous law who was acting upon his own initiative and without the knowledge of Mr. Shapiro.

Mr. Hanley offered his assurances that he had told the judge that the statements they presented did not intend to involve Mr. Shapiro, Mr. Gallagher or any other counsel for plaintiff; the court confirmed that fact.

"The affidavits were then offered to be read and were read aloud to the concluding of the reading. Mr. Hanley stated the affidavits were clumsily drawn and had apparently been drafted by the laymen themselves. The affidavits as then presented in the language by the ones themselves is much less complete and comprehensive and of much less value as evidence than in the form into which they have been worked by the attorneys who drafted them.

"The affidavits that were presented on Tuesday morning before Judge Raymond are not the same that were attached to the motion for a retrial. Practically all of these affidavits were dated April 12, which was the day after Mr. Gallagher had made his motion for a retrial on the ground of prejudice on the part of the court. During that discussion, there was no disclosure on the part of counsel for defendants that they had either this material or any affidavits, although they would have been then pertinent. Since that time the defendants went on with the cross-examination on the Barker-Karpis story, which had been broadly tested as their great main defense. That defense collapsed, because it was shown that all of the things which they alleged were in active conspiracy had been broken down. Mr. Gallagher, the attorney for the defense, became extremely nervous; and these affidavits were introduced in order to prevent on matters which had been in the prosecution for weeks, matters which concerned the defendants, as every officer of the court were bound to make known to the court immediately upon their acquisition.

"The motion presents four grounds for the granting of a retrial:

"1. That Mr. C. A. Hoffman mistook the business of his husband in his original examination.

"2. That the evidence stated falsely that he had no interest factor into the situation. The three real reasons which should have been stated in the affidavits might justify the retrial procedure could be:

"First, a desire to stop the case now. Second, it is not going to the jury. Third, the Ford attorneys thought it was so, or second, that such a retrial means here to be taken to prevent or postpone the appearance of Henry Ford on the stand, probably on the readiness of the court or that he does not want an examination on the stand which he has been bound to the world all these years. Third, that this might give an opportunity to inject another nasty charge in reference to the plaintiff connected with a supposed fact, by the same a charge of dark testimony the plaintiff marked much of the proceedings of this trial.

"Mr. Shapiro, without objection, has stated in the presence of the reporters that he has spoken to many people in the courtroom and outside of the courtroom and has been asked to by many people and he had not knowledge of any affidavits in a person named Miller, nor has he at any time spoken to any person at a time with the request of the court or the hope or the fear that that person would speak to him or on any matter in the trial or on his account. He has been just as easy to talk to as Ford detectives in the trial. This man Miller to the court to accuse Mr. Shapiro as if he had them to have made the affidavits in this case. This entire matter bears the hall of a perfect fooling, a deliberate method for securing a retrial of any sort to delay the appearance of Henry Ford on the stand and to give these defendants a better chance to turn the tide before some other jury.

"It is not my intention to attempt to debate the grounds of the material as far as the court is concerned. The Time is concerned in a different ground, to lawyer known, and in the court and the jury.

"In preparing for the trial in this case, I was in contact with the defense lawyers of the Ford people in connection with the motion and matters in the trial. I had an interview with them and been aware of the affidavits of their descriptions in the affidavits, witnesses, lawyers and attorneys.

"Every regular member of the court has been aware of the fact that Ford detectives have been in constant attendance and knowing the procedure of the trial.

For a number of years, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has been the defendant in suits brought by the federal government to force it to desegregate its schools. In the last case, the government sought to force the NAACP to turn over its membership lists to the federal government. The NAACP refused to do so, and the government sought to force it to do so. The NAACP refused to do so, and the government sought to force it to do so. The NAACP refused to do so, and the government sought to force it to do so.

"Moreover, it is entirely unnecessary to bring up this case any matter reflecting on the integrity or honor of Mrs. Hoffman. The fact of the giving of an interview to a newspaper, is sufficient in itself to warrant the granting of a motion for material to the court on demand and all of this could have been done without a single word reflecting on the honor or the dignity of any woman juror. As a matter of fact, at the session with the judge Mr. Haines made the suggestion that we all agree to excuse Mr. Chapman and proceed with the jury. This still could have been done without attacking the integrity and honor of Mrs. Hoffman in any court. If there were not some other reasons for why this trial is being held in a court and questioned in the press and circulated in the community of Mrs. Hoffman's case, it is proceeding on its merits. Then upon Mr. Hoffman and Mr. Hoffman's wife, and the jury and said that the jury in the interview had asked another Woman Member of Jury.

Judge Raymond today declared the Square-Port case a non-trial, on motion of the Ford attorneys. The Court declared he was granting the motion "largely because justice has been crucified on the cross of unethical and disreputable journalism." This was in reference to an interview with Miss Cova Hoffman, the accused woman urer, printed by a local newspaper while the trial was in progress.

Counsel for the defense presented a motion for a mistrial when Aaron Sapiro's suit against Henry J. Cantor, Jr. was heard in Federal District Court. $100,000 in damages was sought. Judge Fred M. Keene is the federal judge to try this morning.

DICTIONARY OF CHARLES

Clara Hoffman, one of the jurors excused, fully testified, in her preliminary examination as to her qualifications to serve in the effect that her husband, William Hoffman, was engaged only in the plumbing and heating business, whereas his principal business is the operation of a public saloon commonly known as a blind pig in the residence occupied by her and her husband at 6136 Fourteenth avenue.

At the saloon introducing liquor - beer and whisky - are sold in violation of the laws of the United States and the State of Michigan.

In the preliminary examination Carl Hoffman falsely testified that she had an interest in the pending case, when, in fact, prior to said examination, she had stated that she hoped she would be selected for the service in said case, and if she were it would not be necessary for the defendant to aid, as she did not like his methods or anything about him.

John Hoffman, in violation of the instructions of the Court and during the trial of the case, disclosed a forged and cause with a stipulation unknown to the defendants or the Court. The existence of this information and evidence appeared in a daily newspaper published in the City of Chicago on the 14th day of April, 1935.

15 COURT HOUSE

Albert F. Hayes, 50, of 1001 E. 12th St., is in charge of the investigation for the U. S. Marshal's office. He said that he had been asked to attend a meeting of the "American Student Union" at the Hotel Statler on April 9. On that date, he said, he observed that the group was made up of "a few young men and women" who were "talking about the Jewish question."

One of these people, who stated that he was a member of the Communist Party at that time, was not known to the police, but who Department is interested in and believes is known as "Red Mike". Mike was a man appearing to be in his late 30s or 40 years of age, about 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighed in the neighborhood of 170 pounds, was light-skinned and was wearing a dark-colored suit and a dark-colored shirt.

Butterworth said that on the morning of the shooting he saw the prisoner enter the store entering about the crowd in the forenoon and that at the same time he saw Miller approach Mrs. Hoffman. If he had seen anything more and shade hands with Mrs. Miller, according to Butterworth, he told Mrs. Hoffman to go to the store and tell him. The Butterworth said that other sets forth that she was shocked and that Miller thereupon told her that "You can make money, I understand dollars if you can do that."

Mrs. J. from above, is a white female, stated to work away from the State and Miller from the State for arms and they were in the conversation in a low tone. The conversation was in a low tone and she looked about the room and hands with Miller and said, "I'll see you later, the time will say, the time. He said, 'A right' and left in company with two men."

On Thursday, March 27, 1964, a group of about 100 people gathered in the main hall of the American Legion in the city of New York to hear the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr. speak. The speaker was introduced by the Rev. James Bevel, who said that the people of New York were proud to have King in their city. King then spoke for about an hour, and his speech was well received. He said that he was glad to be in New York, and that he was proud to be a part of the civil rights movement. He said that he was going to continue to fight for the rights of the Negro people, and that he was going to continue to work for the peace and unity of the United States. His speech was well received, and the people of New York were proud to have him in their city.

As a matter of fact, it is the opinion with the judge, Mr. Stanley made the suggestion that we all agree to release Mrs. Hoffman and proceed with all jurors. This will avoid having one juror without standing the integrity and honor of Mrs. Hoffman in open court. It was said to some other feature of the which this material to avoid afterwards is expressed in this present and connected to the serving of Mrs. Hoffman and the further proceeding with all jurors. Therefore to Langley and Mr. Marcy with a view from that position and said that Mrs. Hoffman's interview had rejected another factor into the situation. The above real reasons which therefore might justify the present procedure could be

1. A desire to stop the case now because it is really not going in the way that the Grand Jurors thought it would go; or second, that further desperate moves have to be taken to prevent or postpone the appearance of Henry Ford on the stand; or, the realization that it is not safe to leave the court or that he has had face examination on the charges which he has been demanding to the end of all these years; or third, that it is right give an opportunity to file another "new" charge in reference to the plaintiff's connection with a supposed Jew, by the same methods of dark insinuation that have marked much of the proceeding of this trial.

MRS. HOFMANN CLEARED OF BRIBE ALLEGATIONS

Judge Raymond Also Gives Aaron Sapiro a Clean
Slate in Affair.

By WILLIAM J. RICHARDS

Aaron Sapiro, a $100,000 in libel suits, was cleared of bribery charges yesterday. Members of the jury who were sworn to discuss the case a month ago said with one exception they were not prejudiced and had formed an opinion favoring either side.

It remained for the final scenes of reason and determination, and with a brilliant oratory which included references by Judge Fred M.
Raymond to an unethical and degraded journalism, a court order to proceed with contempt action against a libelous attorney, and paper a reiteration by Sapiro's principal spokesman of his charge that the whole proceedings had the unhappy odor of a frame-up, and everyone is a quagmire as to when a re-trial can be held.

It died however with a word of forgiveness for Mrs. Clara Hoffman, the woman placed on stands charged inducement conduct the Ford attorneys based their motion to have the case declared a mistrial.

RICHES OFFERED TO WOMAN JUROR, DETECTIVES SAY

HOFMANN TOLD WIFE TO HOLD OUT FOR $15,000 FEE, PETITION SAYS

Gallagher Denies "Go-between" Is Friend of Defendant Husband Called Operator of Blind Pig.

BY WILLIAM F. FICHARD

Offered by the government in charges in which lawyers for Henry Ford shout "bribery" and counsel for Aaron Sapiro counter charge that an attempt is being made to victimize Sapiro by means of a "perfect frame-up," the $1,000,000 libel suit of the attorney agriculturist against the auto manufacturer in federal court is expected to break up and founder today.

The damage action was caught up yesterday in a storm of accusation by Ford agents—charges that a woman juror was offered "thousands of dollars to have luncheon with a man friendly with Sapiro," that she was heard to say that she would make things unhealthy for "Old Man Ford" if she was selected for jury service, that her husband ran a blind pig.

It was a storm that will not spend itself completely, until this morning, when Judge Fred M. Raymond in federal court, is asked to rule on a motion of Ford counsel that the case be declared a mistrial and that the jury as now constituted be discharged.

The alleged causes which the Ford lawyers will cite are these:

1. That Mrs. William F. Hoffmann, wife of the juror implicated, fully conceded in her preliminary examination as to her qualifications to serve; that her husband, William Hoffmann, was engaged only in the plumbing and heating business, whereas his principal business is the operation of a public saloon, commonly known as a blind pig, in the residence occupied by her and her husband at 5138 Fourteenth Avenue. At the saloon intoxicating liquors are sold in violation of the laws of the United States and Michigan.

2. In preliminary examination Mrs. Hoffmann falsely testified that she had no interest in the pending case, when in fact, prior to said examination she had stated she hoped she would be selected for jury service and that if she were it would not be very healthy for her due to the fact that she did not like to do anything about him.

3. She talked to Miller.

3. That Mrs. Hoffmann, prior to the trial, had been in the court and during the trial had caused the jury to be removed from the courtroom.

4. That Mrs. Hoffmann, in violation of the instructions of the court, held conversations from time to time with a certain person known as "Old Miller" who was in frequent attendance at the trial and acting herein under any circumstances.

With Stewart Hanley for Ford contending the impossibility of continuing the case before a jury of 11 and Gallagher for Hapgood, admitting there can be no legitimate defense to the complaint against the interview given by Mrs. Hanley to a newspaper. It is anticipated that Judge Raymond will endorse the recommendation that the present jury be discharged and a retrial ordered.

Both sides said yesterday they were ready to proceed immediately with such a retrial once a new jury has been obtained.

Mrs. Hanley was at her home last night, haggard after several hours' questioning at the trial building, and refused to talk about the charges filed by the Ford defense.

"I am not permitted to discuss any angle of the trial," she said, which means she was in charge, which means she was in charge, she declared.

George L. Hanley, Jr., of the United States marshal's office, who is charged with the care of the jury, said the trial is not held in the presence of a jury. He said the jury is not in the courtroom. He said the jury is not in the courtroom. He said the jury is not in the courtroom.

Between the two sides...

The case is being handled by the Ford defense. The case is being handled by the Ford defense. The case is being handled by the Ford defense. The case is being handled by the Ford defense. The case is being handled by the Ford defense.

He said customers in the store and a bartender, who said the couple had been there for a long time. He said the couple had been there for a long time. He said the couple had been there for a long time.

William Hanley has a plumbing business located in a house in the rear of the house.

Miller was not at home last night when an interview was called at his residence. His wife, who lives at 1000 North Main street, said that he and his wife had been there part of the day, but that they had not answered the doorbell, even for the grocery. The couple has resided at the address for about three years and were friends of Mrs. Cora McMahan. It is said.

Miller was connected with a police force with officers as central figures for several months, but recently resigned and started in business for himself. No one in the neighborhood could say whether he had opened offices.

UNDEVELOPED PHOTOGRAPHS CAN BE DEVELOPED

It is a well known fact that undeveloped photographs can be developed and the results are often better than those obtained by the ordinary method of development.

The reason for this is that the undeveloped photograph has a latent image which can be brought out by the use of a developer.

There are many reasons why undeveloped photographs should be developed. One of the most important is that they can be used as a record of a particular scene or event.

Another reason is that undeveloped photographs can be used as a means of communication. They can be sent to a friend or a family member and they can be used to tell a story.

There are many other reasons why undeveloped photographs should be developed. They can be used for many different purposes and they can be a valuable part of a collection.

So, if you have any undeveloped photographs, don't throw them away. Develop them and you will be able to see the results of your work.

THE NEW NINTH

The new Ninth is a book of poetry by the famous poet, John Keats. It is a collection of his best work and it is a must-read for anyone who loves poetry.

The book is divided into three parts. The first part contains the most famous of Keats' poems, the second part contains his lesser-known work and the third part contains his letters.

The book is a beautiful example of the power of poetry. It is a collection of words that have inspired generations of readers and it is a testament to the enduring power of the written word.

WM. J. BURNS.
DIRECTOR.

Department of Justice,
Bureau of Investigation,
Washington, D. C.

September 7, 1922.

Memorandum for Mr. Burns:

[REDACTED] called by telephone this morning before you arrived, and stated that the Secretary of Commerce had received information to the effect that HENRY FORD had purchased the Banner Fork Coal Company in 1920 for $1,200,000. b7C

This coal company is located near Covington, Kentucky, and the United States Attorney at Covington is in possession of information to the effect that the mine is producing thirty (30) cars per day, and that Ford is selling one-half (1/2) of the output at $10.00 per ton, which, of course, is an exorbitant price.

[REDACTED] requested that if possible we obtain from the United States Attorney such information as he has in this matter, as the Secretary of Commerce is very desirous of securing it in view of the recent accusation by Ford that coal companies are profiteering on him. b7C

I told [REDACTED] I would at once take up the matter with you, and if you will advise me what action you desire taken, I will draft the necessary correspondence. b7C

Respectfully,

J. E. H.

Vets Oppose Ford Award

Fur Post Protest Plan to Decorate 'Isolationist'

A sharply worded protest against the proposed presentation of the Distinguished Service Medal of the American Legion to Henry Ford at the convention of the Legion next September has been made by Fur Post No. 1049, one of the largest posts in New York City.

In resolutions unanimously passed at a special meeting, Ford was assailed as an isolationist, as one who thwarted military preparedness and as the sponsor of an anti-Semitic campaign which "became the forerunner and foundation of Nazi propaganda."

When it became known that the Trophies and Award Committee of the Legion had designated Ford as one of three to receive the award, the highest given by the Legion, there was indignation among the members of Fur Post.

The other two were the late Secretary of the Navy Knox and Gen. H. H. Arnold, of the Army Air Forces. Last year, the medal was given to Gen. George Marshall and Adm. King. Other recipients have been Gens. Pershing and MacArthur. Only 16 such awards have been made in the past 25 years.

Warns of Ridicule

The resolutions said:

"We vehemently protest against the award of the Distinguished Service Medal to Henry Ford, whose claim to fame rests primarily upon his contribution to industrial mass production and his creation of a vast private industrial dynasty and monetary fortune, and whose claim to public recognition for service to our country is denied, contested and held in serious doubt by a substantial part of our citizenry for the following reasons:

"1—His assistance to the America First Committee, an organization of isolationists who before Pearl Harbor strove their utmost to keep our nation blindfolded and unprepared to meet the reality of the danger of aggression.

"2—His employment of one of its accredited leaders, Lindbergh.

Anti-Semitic Articles

"3—His sponsorship of the vicious anti-Semitic articles in the Dearborn Independent, owned and published by him, which for seven years preached, fostered and incited anti-Semitism and spread its malignant seed throughout our land, and sought thereby to divide our Nation internally and to foment hatred and disunity, and was the first to conduct a systematic campaign of anti-Semitism which became the forerunner and foundation of Nazi propaganda throughout the world, and sought to perpetuate, with the vast power of his money, an established fraud against an entire race which is still being perpetuated with the power of his name in his book entitled The International Jew.

"4—His acquiescence in the continuing publication and circulation of books and pamphlets containing the Dearborn Independent articles, or extracts therefrom without objection or hindrance from him."

The resolutions will now go to the county committee, then the state committee and finally the national executive committee of the Legion.

ON FARM AND FACTORY

DANGER to our country is to be apprehended not so much from the influence of new things as from our forgetting the value of old things. At present, much that is blamed on the new thing—the machine—should perhaps be blamed on our forgetting what we had before the machine came, namely, the land. The two belong together; they cannot live apart; there is no antagonism between them; they must be reunited.

I do not look for less but more use of machinery. If the world is to have even a minimum supply of goods, it must utilize the machine. The people will never willingly forego the help which the machine gives them in their work.

Besides, machinery makes more jobs. It enables every one to enjoy inexpensively the comforts and conveniences of modern living conditions. As for overproduction, we have never yet had a sufficient production of all the things which the family needs. It would be splendid if the world should seriously attempt to overproduce everything that everybody needs! We should then discover that our present machine facilities could not even catch up with the need. Give the world a money system that makes it easier for goods to flow from man to man, and all the factories on earth could not begin to supply a tenth of the demand.

But it is possible to expect of the machine more than it can do. We cannot eat or wear machines. If the world were one vast machine shop, it would die. When it comes to sustaining life, we go to the fields. The machine may help us plant, cultivate, harvest, grind and bake the grain for bread. The machine may weave and cut and sew for clothing. The machine may transport these necessities for our use. In doing so, it serves in partnership with the land. And it is that relation and balance which I am urging upon our people today.

Ten years ago we started seven village industries on small water power sites, all within twenty miles of Dearborn, our purpose being to combine the advantages of city wages with country living. The experiment has been a continuous success. Overhead cost has been less than that in the big factory, and the workers would not hear of going back to the city shops. As they are free to till land in the growing season, throughout these trying times they have all remained self-sustaining. Their security is produced by machine and farm, not by one alone.

While this experiment has fully justified itself, I have felt that it is only a step in the right direction. Excellent as village industries are, they do not really bring industry and agriculture together. For a long time now I have believed that industry and agriculture are natural partners and that they should begin to recognize and practice their partnership. Each of them is suffering from ailments which the other can cure. Agriculture needs a wider and steadier market; industrial workers need more and steadier jobs. Can each be made to supply what the other needs? I think so.

The link between is Chemistry. In the vicinity of Dearborn we are farming twenty thousand acres for everything from sunflowers to soy beans. We pass the crops through our laboratory to learn how they may be used in the manufacture of motor cars and thus provide an industrial market for the farmers' products. I foresee the time when industry shall no longer denude the forests which require generations to mature, nor use up the mines which were ages in the making, but shall draw its raw material largely from the annual produce of the fields. The dinner table of the world is not a sufficient outlet for the farmers' products; there must be found a wider market if agriculture is to be all that it is competent to become. And where is that market to be found if not in industry?

I am convinced that we shall be able to get out of yearly crops most of the basic materials which we now get from forest and mine. That is to say, we shall grow annually many if not most of the substances needed in manufacturing. When that day comes, and it is surely on the way, the farmer will not lack a market and the worker will not lack a job. More people will live in the country. The present unnatural condition will be naturally balanced again. Our foundations will be once more securely laid in the land.

The day of small industry near the farm will return, because much of the material grown for industry can be given its first processing by the men who raised it. The master farmer will become, as he was in former years, master of a form of industry besides.

An old Roman said that corn was never so plentiful in Rome as when the men who ruled the state were those who also tilled the fields. It will be so with our people when those who fabricate the utilities of the world are those who raise the raw material from the fields.

One thing is certain—we must go on—present conditions cannot be stabilised—life goes on. I suppose that in 1632 there were people who urged that the world had gone far enough and that it should be halted and hardened into the pattern of 1632. And again in 1732, others thought that a line should be drawn and conditions stabilised. In 1832 the same proposal—it is always made—every generation makes it. Suppose the world had halted at any of those dates! Are we to declare that 1932 is the date at which development must cease and the world be stabilised just as it is? It cannot be done. Life would burst any barriers we might raise against its ongoing. We do not yet control all the materials out of which to assemble a world that is worthy to endure unchanged. Our times are primitive. True progress is yet to come. The industrial age has scarcely dawned as yet; we see only its first crude beginnings.

We are pioneers, and pioneering has its hardships. This generation is composed of economic pilgrims, passing out of less desirable conditions into what we hope shall be more desirable ones. That is the meaning of these times. We are not going back, and false prosperity is not soon coming back. It would be well to interpret present conditions in this light and help each other in the good old pioneer way, as we pass through them. We are going to renew our stake in the land; for the land is the foundation of the economic security which we seek.

WE ARE still in the early stage of world-making. To stabilize conditions at a given point or to reject progress because it brings problems with it, is impossible. We need to plan how to pass through necessary changes with the least human hardship. Economic changes must come and it is possible for men to be in a position to welcome rather than dread them. With factory and farm as partners, with one foot on the soil and one foot planted on industry, we should be in a position to hail the new epoch without fear. The land would protect us from needless anxiety.

HENRY FORD ON SELF-HELP

My views of how people can best be helped are not new. The present period has only brought them into intensive application. Nearly twenty years ago when we established our minimum wage, which is now six dollars a day, we had the other side of the problem. It was then a problem of sudden prosperity. We tried to teach our employes how to handle their resources to the best advantage and how to evade the parasites which wait on every hand for the workers' wages. There was no criticism of our methods then; in fact, they were commended. They are the same methods now with such improvements as experience has suggested.

I said, in the first of this series, that being out of some one's employ need not mean being out of work. In the last analysis independence means self-dependence. Dependence on some one else for employment in busy times may too easily become dependence on some one else for support in slack times.

If it is right and proper to help people to become wise managers of their own affairs in good times, it cannot be wrong to pursue the same object in dull times. Independence through self-dependence is a method which must commend itself when understood.

Methods of self-help are numerous and great numbers of people have made the stimulating discovery that they need not depend on employers to find work for them—they can find work for themselves. I have more definitely in mind those who have not yet made that discovery, and I should like to express certain convictions I have tested.

The land! That is where our roots are. There is the basis of our physical life. The farther we get away from the land, the greater our insecurity. From the land comes everything that supports life, everything we use for the service of physical life. The land has not collapsed or shrunk in either extent or productivity. It is there waiting to honor all the labor we are willing to invest in it, and able to tide us across any dislocation of economic conditions.

No unemployment insurance can be compared to an alliance between a man and a plot of land. With one foot in industry and another foot in the land, human society is firmly balanced against most economic uncertainties. With a job to supply him with cash, and a plot of land to guarantee him support, the individual is doubly secure. Stocks may fail, but seedtime and harvest do not fail.

I am not speaking of stop-gaps or temporary expedients. Let every man and every family at this season of the year cultivate a plot of land and raise a sufficient supply for themselves or others. Every city and village has vacant space whose use would be permitted. Groups of employed men could rent farms for small sums and operate them on the co-operative plan. Employed men, in groups of ten, twenty or fifty, could rent farms and operate them with several unemployed families. Or, they could engage a farmer with his farm to be their farmer this year, either as employe or on shares. There are farmers who would be glad to give a decent indigent family a corner of a field on which to live and provide against next winter. Industrial concerns everywhere would gladly make it possible for their men, employed and unemployed, to find and work the land. Public-spirited citizens and institutions would most willingly assist in these efforts at self-help.

I do not urge this solely or primarily on the ground of need. It is a definite step to the restoration of normal business activity. Families who adopt self-help have that amount of free money to use in the channels of trade. That in turn means a flow of goods, an increase in employment, a general benefit.

When I suggested this last year and enabled our own people to make the experiment, the critics said that it would mean competition with the farmer. If that were true it would constitute a serious defect in the plan. My interest is the success and prosperity of the farmer is attested by my whole business career.

The farmer is carrying in the form of heavy taxes the burden of families who cannot afford to buy his produce. Enabling them to raise their own food would not be taking a customer away from the farmer, but would be actually lifting a family off the tax-payer's back. It is argued that farm products are so cheap that it is better to buy than grow them. This would be impressive if every one had money to spend. Farm products are cheap because purchasing power is low. And the farmer paying taxes helps to pay the difference. The course I suggest is not competition with the farmer; it deprives him of no customer; it does not affect the big market crops. Gardens never hurt the farmer. Partnerships between groups of city men and individual farmers certainly help the farmer. When a family lifts itself off the welfare lists or increases its free cash by raising its food, it actually helps the farmer as it does every one else, including itself. In fact, it is fundamental that no one is hurt by self-help. In the relief of tax burdens and the revival of industry the farmer would share the benefit.

I do not wish to be too detailed in this suggestion. I know what we shall do in our own part of the country and with our own people. How this method is to be suited to conditions in all parts of the country must be determined. I am urging Branch Managers of the Ford Motor Company and Ford dealers everywhere to study this suggestion and find the best method of applying it to their communities.

It is not a question of selling land, or of rents. Those who have the land must offer it to those who will use it. We ourselves shall farm large tracts of land, not for profit, but in experimental search for new market outlets for the farmer. We are saying to our people: "Here is the land. How much can you use?" For several years we have been running large crops of everything from sunflowers to soy beans through our chemical laboratory, in an effort to find an annual market for the farmer's produce—but that is a story I shall have to postpone until tomorrow's issue of this publication. I mention it now to show that even in these larger operations we are not entering into competition with the farmer. Our hope for agriculture is to make it the partner of industry.

MANY people have found ways to self-help. Others have yet to learn how. The one wide-open, practical, certain unemployment insurance is the land. A family with its food assured is a family that can face the world. Both employed and unemployed men should invest their labor in the land this season. Hoarded labor is as harmful to the nation as hoarded cash. The family garden helps everybody and hurts none. It even helps the farmer by lifting the burden of public welfare taxes. Let every man and every family cultivate a plot of land this year, first for their own benefit, next for the benefit of the farmer, and for the benefit of the nation in general.

HENRY FORD ON UNEMPLOYMENT

I HAVE always had to work, whether any one hired me or not. For the first forty years of my life, I was an employe. When not employed by others, I employed myself. I found very early that being out of hire was not necessarily being out of work. The first means that your employer has not found something for you to do; the second means that you are waiting until he does.

We nowadays think of work as something that others find for us to do, call us to do, and pay us to do. No doubt our industrial growth is largely responsible for that. We have accustomed men to think of work that way.

In my own case, I was able to find work for others as well as myself. Outside my family life, nothing has given me more satisfaction than to see jobs increase in number and in profit to the men who handle them. And beyond question, the jobs of the world today are more numerous and profitable in wages than they were even eighteen years ago.

But something entirely outside the workshops of the nation has affected this hired employment very seriously. The word "unemployment" has become one of the most dreadful words in the language. The condition itself has become the concern of every person in the country.

When this condition arrived, there were just three things to be done. The first, of course, was to maintain employment at the maximum by every means known to management. Employment—hire—was what the people were accustomed to; they preferred it; it was the immediate solution of the difficulty. In our plants we used every expedient to spread as much employment over as many employes as was possible. I don't believe in "make work"—the public pays for all unnecessary work—but there are times when the plight of others compels us to do the human thing even though it be but a makeshift; and I am obliged to admit that, like most manufacturers, we avoided layoffs by continuing work that good business judgment would have halted. All of our non-profit work was continued in full force and much of the shop work. There were always tens of thousands employed—the lowest point at Dearborn was 40,000—but there were always thousands unemployed or so meagerly employed, that the situation was far from desirable.

When all possible devices for providing employment have been used and fall short, there remains no alternative but self-help or charity.

I do not believe in routine charity. I think it a shameful thing that any man should have to stoop to take it, or give it. I do not include human helpfulness under the name of charity. My quarrel with charity is that it is neither helpful nor human. The charity of our cities is the most barbarous thing in our system, with the possible exception of our prisons. What we call charity is a modern substitute for being personally kind, personally concerned and personally involved in the work of helping others in difficulty. True charity is a much more costly effort than money-giving. Our donations too often purchase exemption from giving the only form of help that will drive the need for charity out of the land.

Our own theory of helping people has been in operation for some years. We used to discuss it years ago—when no one could be persuaded to listen. Those who asked public attention to these matters were ridiculed by the very people who now call most loudly for some one to do something.

Our own work involves the usual emergency relief, hospitalization, adjustment of debt, with this addition—we help people to alter their affairs in common-sense accordance with changed conditions, and we have an understanding that all help received should be repaid in reasonable amounts in better times. Many families were not so badly off as they thought; they needed guidance in the management of their resources and opportunities. Human nature, of course, presented the usual problems. Relying on human sympathy many develop a spirit of professional indigence. But where co-operation is given, honest and self-respecting persons and families can usually be assisted to a condition which is much less distressing than they feared.

One of our responsibilities, voluntarily assumed—not because it was ours, but because there seemed to be no one else to assume it—was the care of a village of several hundred families whose condition was pretty low. Ordinarily a large welfare fund would have been needed to accomplish anything for these people. In this instance, we set the people at work cleaning up their homes and backyards, and then cleaning up the roads of their town, and then plowing up about 500 acres of vacant land around their houses. We abolished everything that savored of "handout" charity, opening instead a modern commissary where personal I O U's were accepted, and a garment-making school, and setting the cobblers and tailors of the community to work for their neighbors. We found the people heavily burdened with debt, and we acted informally as their agents in apportioning their income to straighten their affairs. Many families are now out of debt for the first time in years. There has appeared in this village not only a new spirit of confidence in life, but also a new sense of economic values, and an appreciation of economic independence which we feel will not soon be lost. None of these things could have been accomplished by paying out welfare funds after the orthodox manner. The only true charity for these people was somehow to get under their burdens with them and lend them the value of our experience to show them what can be done by people in their circumstances.

Our visiting staff in city work has personally handled thousands of cases in the manner above described. And while no one institution can shoulder all the burden, we feel that merely to mitigate present distress is not enough—we feel that thousands of families have been prepared for a better way of life when the wheels of activity begin turning again.

But there is still another way, a third way, so much better than the very best charitable endeavor that it simply forbids us to be satisfied with anything less. That is the way of Self-Help, which I shall discuss in tomorrow's issue of this publication.

THE unemployed man is every one's concern, Henry Ford says—most of all the man's own concern. Being unemployed does not need to mean being out of work. There may be work even though one may not be hired to do it. Mr. Ford begins today a discussion of Employment, Charity and Self-Help as the three courses open to us in present conditions. He does not believe in routine charity because, he says, it is neither kind nor helpful. It does not get under the load or tackle the cause. He describes here a method he has followed. In tomorrow's issue of this publication he will discuss Self-Help.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE DIRECTOR

Re:

Re: CHICAGO TRIBUNE

The Chicago Tribune is presently working on a series of articles to be run in the future in regard to crime conditions in Chicago. In these articles the Tribune will attempt to publicize the hoodlums who control the various types of crime in Chicago. of the Tribune, who is working on these articles, I found that up to this time the Tribune had been unable to obtain information relative to those controlling crime in Chicago, and, to the contrary, found that crime was not nearly as well organized at the present time as it was during the so-called Capone era.

Re: HENRY FORD

For some time the rumor has persisted around Chicago that Mr. Henry Ford is seriously ill, although I understand that those close to him in Detroit have denied this. However, during the week of Ford, voluntarily advised me that in talking to Harry Bennett, Bennett had stated that Mr. Ford is confined to his home and that he was troubled with a "sore foot". did not believe this, however, and feels that Mr. Ford is quite ill. Those engaged in the automotive trade are very much interested in Mr. Ford's health because they are firmly convinced that after Mr. Ford dies there will be a number of changes in the Ford organization. They also feel that the Ford Company may be bought out by some other interest because they do not feel that Henry Ford II is either qualified or has the desire to attempt to operate the Ford Company.

Re: LABOR CONDITIONS

About two weeks ago the War Manpower Commission estimated that there was a 58,000 employee shortage in the Chicago area. During the week I have had occasion to talk to of the and both of them advised me that at the present time there is no labor shortage in so far as plants are concerned.

is an excess of skilled labor but that unskilled labor is not quite so plentiful because of the fact that workers do not want to work for less than $1.15 an hour. All of the large plants around Chicago are dismissing employees by the thousands and a number of the larger plants expect to shut down during July and August.

Respectfully submitted, of rubber. [redacted] was impressed with Subject and his apparent knowledge of the physical conditions as well as the climate and people of Panama and looked upon his proposition with much favor. In this interview, [redacted] represented himself as being formerly connected with the Department of State and an attache to the Legation of some Central or South American country, and while serving in this capacity, saw the possibilities for the development of rubber plantations in Panama.

Before acting on the proposal submitted by [redacted] accompanied by [redacted] rubber expert and buyer of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, and [redacted] called on Mr. Henry Ford to get his opinion as to the feasibility of such an expedition. Mr. Ford was also impressed with [redacted] and seemed greatly interested in the proposition and encouraged [redacted] to send [redacted] to Panama with a view of obtaining options on land which he deemed suitable for the growing of rubber.

On June 4th, 1923, an agreement was entered into between Mr. Amos C. Miller, acting for the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company and who was then General Counsel and a Director of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company and [redacted] whereby [redacted] was to proceed forthwith to the Republic of Panama to acquire options to purchase between one and one and one-half million acres of land in the provinces of Colon, Veraguas, Chiriqui and Bocas del Toro. A drawing account of $25,000.00 was placed at the disposal of [redacted] with which he was to purchase the options and finance the expedition. Under the terms of this agreement [redacted] was to receive a salary of $500.00 per month. It was understood that [redacted] was not to use the name of H. S. Firestone, The Firestone Tire and Rubber Company or Henry Ford in connection with any of the deals he made, the same to be handled under the name of Mr. Amos C. Miller.

[redacted] the services of [redacted] in Panama were very unsatisfactory and his conduct was not at all pleasing to him. Shortly after [redacted] reached Panama, he negotiated for options on land, the acreage being far in excess of that authorized by the agreement, which, if carried out, would have resulted in obligations on behalf of Mr. Amos C. Miller, representing the Firestone organization, of about $1,000,000.00. He also betrayed the confidence imposed in him by boastfully stating to officers of the United States Army and others that he represented the interests of Henry Ford and H. S. Firestone. When information of his conduct reached the Firestone organization, he was cabled to suspend further activities in their behalf until the arrival of their representatives. [redacted] rubber expert, and [redacted] of the legal staff of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company were immediately sent to check up on Subject's activities.

On arrival in Panama, [redacted] found that [redacted] was much more interested in a tribe of "White Indians", which he was supposed to have discovered while on his travels about Panama, than in the matters which he was delegated to investigate and in which Mr. Firestone was particularly interested. [redacted] accompanied [redacted] on a tour of inspection along the coast of Panama and into several of the provinces, but did not approve any of the options as they found the land rugged and mostly infertile and in their judgment not suitable for extensive rubber production. Further activities on behalf of Mr. Firestone by [redacted] were abandoned and [redacted] returned to the United States with [redacted]

Subsequent proposals dated December 15th, 1923 and November 15th, 1924 were submitted by [REDACTED] to Mr. Firestone, outlining expeditions into sections of Panama in the interests of science and commerce, in which he would have the co-operation of the United States Army and Navy, the United States Department of Commerce, and other Government agencies, President Norras of Panama, and the representatives of the Smithsonian Institution and several of the leading universities would accompany him. These proposals called for an advance to [REDACTED] by Mr. Firestone of $10,000 and $15,000 respectively for expenses and he, [REDACTED] was to receive as remuneration for his services a 10% interest in any of the land acquired for the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company. Mr. Firestone refused to entertain these proposals and in his reply to [REDACTED] stated he had no further interests in his activities. b7c

Chas. Rogers Det. [redacted]
Special Agent ~~Ed A. Bennett~~ of the ~~San Diego~~ Office telephonically communicated with writer at this time advising that a conversation between Ford, Lindbergh, and Bennett had been overheard and Lindbergh was reported to have stated that he was obtaining considerable information from an Army officer. Lindbergh is reported to have called on this man at Washington, D. C., and this individual enlightened him on certain aspects pertaining to the Army and Navy. Lindbergh is reported to have said that this man held the same view as he did; to wit, that we were woefully unprepared to wage any successful campaign against the Axis at this time.

It was reported that Lindbergh stated he was getting his information directly from a few sources in the Army and Navy who were in a position to know what they were talking about.

This conversation is reported to have taken place at Bennett's office about three weeks ago.

The writer received a telephone call from SAC Bugas at Detroit, at which time he advised that you had requested him to interview Harry Bennett with reference to his conversation with Lindbergh some time ago.

Bugas stated that he had interviewed Bennett who stated that about three weeks ago Lindbergh had come to Detroit, apparently at the invitation of Mr. Ford, but this was not quite clear; that they had had a conversation in which Mr. Ford had remonstrated with Lindbergh about his trying to appear as an authority on the armed strength of the United States and on how many soldiers and how much equipment it would take to bring a war against Germany to a successful close. According to Bennett, Henry Ford cautioned Lindbergh about talking about things he knew little about first hand; that is, how our forces were set up, the strength of our forces and the technical matters concerning our armed forces. Ford further told Lindbergh that the heads of our Army and Navy must certainly know what they are doing because they are in close touch with the situation and have all the facts in their possession. To that Lindbergh made a rather general reply to the effect that he was not talking without having facts in his possession; that he was getting a great many of his facts from the people holding high positions in the Army. He mentioned one man by name in Washington, D. C. who was an Army officer; however, Mr. Bennett stated he was not able to recall the name in view of the numerous other matters that were mentioned.

Bugas stated that this conversation appeared to be a three-cornered conversation with Henry Ford, Bennett and Lindbergh all taking a part; that Lindbergh indicated that when in Washington he usually made it a point to drop into the War Department and while there he would contact this Army officer whose views were in line with Lindbergh's and who would usually furnish Lindbergh with information concerning these matters.

Bugas stated there was no mention made which would indicate that Lindbergh in any way knew of the existence of the war plans; that the conversation between Ford and Lindbergh occurred about three weeks ago.

Respectfully,

ss?

Mr. SIMONS. I have talked on the unemployment situation in many speeches I have made, particularly within the last year. During the unemployment strike at 2,000,000 out of work. This is one of the main issues before us and, naturally, receives primary attention.

Mr. BACHMANN. Have you told your audience not to be alarmed about the present unemployment conditions?

Mr. SIMONS. Do I tell them that? That comes from the capitalists; the capitalists are the ones that tell the workers there is nothing to be worried about.

Mr. BACHMANN. I did not ask you that; I asked you if you told them that?

Mr. SIMONS. I stated yesterday that I put forward the program of the Communist Party—the enactment of a national social insurance bill that I presented yesterday.

Mr. BACHMANN. I did not ask you that.

Mr. SIMONS. That is what we stand for.

Mr. BACHMANN. I asked you if you tell the workers in your audience not to be alarmed about the unemployment situation?

Mr. SIMONS. I will tell you exactly what I tell them.

Mr. BACHMANN. I do not want to know all that you tell them;
I just want to know whether you tell them that or not?

Mr. SIMONS. I want to tell you exactly what I tell them and then you can judge whether it is a matter of alarm or not. I tell them the facts. Whether it is alarming information, I tell them the facts about unemployment in the United States, and I tell them that unemployment is growing; I quote the financial papers of the boss class, the New York Analyst, and I quote that conditions are getting worse.
There is more unemployment; wage cuts are growing. I tell them it certainly is alarming for the working class and certainly is alarming for the boss class, because they can not solve the unemployment.

Mr. BACHMANN. Now would you mind going back and answering the question?

Mr. SIMONS. Well, that is my answer.

Mr. BACHMANN. Let me ask you whether or not you made a speech in Oakland on or about July 27, 1930?

Mr. SIMONS. It is hard to say; I have made so many speeches in Oakland.

Mr. BACHMANN. Well, about that time?

Mr. SIMONS. I could not state definitely. I have made speeches there from time to time and may have made one on that date. If you will tell me which particular one you are referring to, where it was made, I might refresh my recollection.

Mr. BACHMANN. Let me ask you whether or not you said in a speech what I am going to read to you, on or about the 27th of July, at Oakland:

Fellow workers and comrades, don't be alarmed at this unemployment situation and the economic crisis that confronts us here to-day. Fellow workers, do you know that the workers of Russia are denying and depriving themselves of all luxuries, even the necessities and essentials of life, to produce commodities in Soviet Russia and ship them to the United States to flood the markets over here; to cause manufacturers to shut down; to undersell the American manufacturer, throwing the workers of the United States into the unemployed army; simply fertilizing the fields to sow seeds of communism in the United States?

What difference does it make to you if we gain our point, if we do produce these things by convict labor? We are all workers for the cause of freedom.

for the transportation of the proletariat throughout the whole world. Now, is Mr. Flax and his henchmen going to put an embargo on Russian products and commodities, when we have Henry Ford, the General Electric Co. backing up behind the Government to get the money and to keep it permanently off shore they have fulfilled their obligations with Soviet Russia? Do you think for a minute that these companies, with their millions of dollars, that they have taken from you workers, are going to allow an interference with getting the rest of the money that they have not already gotten?

Did you make that statement in a speech?

Mr. SIMONS. I will tell you what I may have said.

Mr. BACHMANN. I did not ask you that; I asked you whether you made that statement. All I want to know is whether you made it or did not?

Mr. SIMONS. You can not get any yes or no answer on that. I will tell you what I said. If you quote to me three pages long and ask me "Yes or no," you can not get any yes-or-no answer.

Mr. BACHMANN. Did you make this statement?

Mr. SIMONS. Has this been testified to the committee as evidence of a speech I made, or not? I want to know who is presenting this and is this an official document before the committee?

Mr. BACHMANN. Did you make that statement I read to you in a speech at Oakland on or about the date I stated?

Mr. SIMONS. Can I know who is presenting this as a speech of mine?

Mr. BACHMANN. I am asking you whether you made that statement or not?

Mr. SIMONS. I want to know, first, who says I made a speech like that.

Mr. BACHMANN. Answer the question.

Mr. SIMONS. I will tell you what I said. You are covering about 55 points in that. It is impossible to say yes or no. I will tell you what I said about those conditions.

Mr. BACHMANN. I do not want to know what you said other than an answer to the question, whether or not you made this statement in a speech over there. I have not any time to listen to your speeches or wrangling about what you want to say now. Did you make this statement in a speech, or didn't you make it?

Mr. SIMONS. I will tell you what I said about the unemployment crisis.

Mr. BACHMANN. Are you afraid to say whether you did make that statement, or not?

Mr. SIMONS. It is not a matter of fear. I told you yesterday about what I said about unemployment and everything else when you asked about the Soviet Union. We are trying to tell the workers who are responsible for the unemployment conditions in this country—

The CHAIRMAN. The question asked you was merely if that is an accurate statement of what you said. You refuse to answer!

Mr. SIMONS. I wish to answer; I will answer the question whether or not I said it.

The CHAIRMAN. We have asked you whether that is a correct statement of what you said.

Mr. SIMONS. I will say, more or less in general, that is a false and lying statement of the facts, that I could not have said, when they

The CHAIRMAN. We do not want any to get a chance to make any speeches take this and answer what was read. It is wrong as to what you said.

Mr. SIMONS. I will give you a chance, if you will let me tell you—

The CHAIRMAN. We do not want any speeches; you are not going to get a chance to make any speeches; but, if you want, you may take this and answer what was read here and point out wherein it is wrong as to what you said.

Mr. SIMONS. All right; let me have that statement. I never made any statement to the workers of America "don't be alarmed at this unemployment situation and the economic crisis that confronts us here to-day." On the contrary, I tell them it is a situation that is alarming and getting worse and the workers must organize against it and demand unemployment insurance.

And the statement that the workers of Russia are denying and depriving themselves of all luxuries, and so forth, to produce commodities in Soviet Russia and ship them to all markets—I never made any such statement, and that has been backed up even in the wheat proposition your committee has been investigating, where the brokers have said in effect it was a hedging proposition by the Soviet Union and had no effect on prices; was not responsible for the crisis in agriculture and the driving of the farmers off of their lands. No, sir. On the contrary, I said that the policy of the Government—

Mr. NELSON. Contrary to what?

Mr. SIMONS. Contrary to causing the manufacturers to shut down, that the policy was to keep them alive on orders from the Soviet Government.

Mr. NELSON. I want to give you every opportunity in the world, but just do this: Read there what it says and, if you did not say it, say so. Then I have no objection to your stating what you did say; but, at least, let us have some order to this.

Mr. SIMONS. All right. The charge here is that I said the Russian workers are responsible for causing the manufacturers to shut down.

Mr. NELSON. You did not say that?

Mr. SIMONS. No.

Mr. NELSON. Then put it in that order; because, if you want to deny this, do it; but denying something out of your head does not put it in the record, and you want it to go into the record.

Mr. SIMONS. I thought the record was to be authentic. Perhaps I should not have thought so.

Mr. NELSON. It is; but you read a sentence and you do not get the sentence into the record unless you read it out loud, and you do not get your denial into the record.

Mr. SIMONS. What is the record kept for then—only to put in what you want?

Mr. NELSON. You read the paragraph there and then say what you said. We do not know what you are reading.

Mr. SIMONS. I read that there [indicating].

INVESTIGATION OF COMMUNIST PROPAGANDA

Mr. NELSON. Read it now and, if you did not say it, say what you say.

Mr. SIMONS (reading). Fellow workers and comrades, don't be alarmed at this unemployment situation and the economic crisis that confronts us here to-day. Fellow workers, do you know that the workers of Russia are starving and depriving themselves of all luxuries, even the necessities and essentials of life, to produce commodities in Soviet Russia and ship them to the United States to flood the markets over here; to cause manufacturers to shut down; to undersell the American manufacturer, throwing the workers of the United States into the unemployed army; simply fertilizing the fields to sow seeds of communism.

Mr. BACHMANN. Did you make that statement?

Mr. SIMONS. No. My statement was that the conditions in this country are responsible, the system itself in this country, the periodical, cyclical crises, cause unemployment, cause plants to be shut down, and that the Soviet Union was sending out their products, at some sacrifice, although the workers have a fair standard of living, which is constantly improving, better than it was before the war; that they are sending out goods in order to get credits to be able to buy machinery, to build up industries so that the working class conditions can be improved and that is what they are doing it for. The responsibility for the crisis is upon the American capitalist.

What difference does it make to you if we gain our point, if we do produce these things by convict labor?

I want to say that in the Soviet Union—

Mr. NELSON. Wait a minute. Did you make that statement?

Mr. SIMONS. I did not. I said that so far as the Soviet Union is concerned, labor is free and even those in prisons, the labor of prisoners is not in competition with labor of other workers in the Soviet Union—no competition. It does not affect them; it is simply that the prisoner is treated as a worker and a human being and permitted to live and to support his family, instead of as here the worker doing work because he is a victim of the capitalist of this country.

We are all martyrs for the cause of freedom.

I never made any such statement. Nobody talks about martyrdom. Every one in the Communist Party knows the class to which he belongs and does his share for the working-class movement and organization.

Now, is Mr. Fish and his henchmen going to put an embargo on Russian products and commodities, when we have Henry Ford, the Austin Manufacturing Co., and the General Electric Co. backing us, causing this country to lift the embargo and keep it permanently off until they have fulfilled their 500,000,000 contracts with Soviet Russia?

It is such a confused statement that I never could have made it. Discussing the embargo, I pointed out that this was a method used by the bosses of this country to protect themselves and stated that the Soviet Union had a right, we defend the right of the Soviet Union, to send its goods anywhere, all over the world, to be put on the market, because that would benefit the working class of the Soviet Union and would not be used against the working class anywhere else.

Do you think for a minute that these companies, with their millions of dollars that they have taken from you workers, are going to allow any interference with getting the rest of the money that they have not already gotten?

All religions have the same purpose, but since we live in a Christian country we have to pay more attention to the destruction of the Christian religion than to any other. We have to free the brains of the workers so they will want to free their own bodies. Many radicals are of the opinion that the religious issue will take care of itself. It will not. Capitalism is taking care of it now, to the great injury of the workers. It is up to the radical groups to take care of it, expose its power and its fallacy, in order to free the slave brain from the insanity of religious faith. Do you doubt that religion is a form of insanity? We confine in an asylum the man who says that he is Napoleon; and we let the man who sings "I'm going to be an angel" live freely in our midst.

The gods and god worshippers and the capitalists who finance both, should either prove the existence of their gods or consign them to oblivion. It is up to the believers in a Supreme Being to prove there is one. They have never done so. They accept on faith what no one has ever demonstrated by fact to exist. Moreover, it is up to any being who wants to be accepted as a god to prove his own claims to divinity in such a manner that no one—child, savage, or scientist—can possibly misunderstand. If your god is omnipotent, he should have sufficient power to demonstrate his own existence. If he is merciful, he should desire to do so, that religious dissension may be prevented. If he is a jealous god, then he should do the same thing for his own glory. The world is several hundred billion years old. As we have waited all these billions of years for proof of the existence of god, we are likely to wait some time longer. No god ever did anything to demonstrate his own existence.

The religionist's position is the positive. The atheist's position is the negative. No court of law requires the proof of a negative. It is up to the gods and the god-worshippers to prove their positive position. No man, for example, can prove that he is not guilty of murder, theft, or any other crime. The law presumes him innocent until he is proven guilty. When the jury brings in a verdict of "not guilty" they do so simply because the prosecution has failed to prove his guilt, not at all because he has proven his innocence. No negative can be demonstrated, every positive can be. If a positive statement can not be demonstrated, then that of itself proves the negative to be the correct and truthful position. No god has ever been proven to exist, therefore the atheist takes the logical position that he does not exist.

The agnostic straddles the fence, either through fear of public opinion, family troubles, or through a sneaking fear that there might be a god, and if there is one, he wants to stand well with him. In other words, the agnostic is still obsessed by the remains of the religious fear implanted in him while he was a helpless child.

Capitalism has no use for atheists who come along and destroy its gods and upset its ethical creed. It knows that if the man or woman who scoffs at gods and bells and heavens is allowed to go freely about inspiring others to do likewise the god idea will soon fall into disrepute. The K. K. K. has already announced that speakers for the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism will not be allowed to talk in certain States. It may be assumed that the Klan is prepared to use violence to prevent atheist meetings or, as in the present case, debates between atheists and theologians, as there is no legal means of doing so. A movement to put the Bible into the schools of California and other States which do not now compel religious instruction is well organized and heavily financed. Other religious groups, also well supplied with money, are organized for the purpose of controlling the leisure time of the people. Capitalism, not being able to force people to attend church services by direct legislation has, with the aid of the holy ones of god, devised laws and regulations which make it illegal to go anywhere else, or engage in any amusement or useful occupation on Sunday. By such means they hope to enforce church attendance. People like to go somewhere on the only day when they are not working and the godly believe that they will go to church if all other attractions are closed to them. Capitalism has been careless in this matter for a number of years and church attendance has steadily decreased. But in a very few years, if that class has its will done, there will be no place to go on Sunday except to a church; and a few years later they will make it illegal to stay at home.

Capitalism has unwittingly defeated some of its own objects in this matter of church attendance. Henry Ford, for example, is anxious to see religion flourish. He is a very religious man himself and expects everyone else to be, also. Yet the Ford factories have made and sold over 12,000,000 cheap cars, thereby giving millions of people something else to think about than the hereafter, and furnishing them with a means of taking their families to the open country on Sunday. The motion picture and the radio have done more to keep people away from churches and to weaken religious influence than any radical propaganda.

Capitalism realizes this. Hence the Sunday closing laws, the Government and church monopoly of the radio, Government censorship of the films, and other restrictive legislation. Having already secured control of the education of the children, of the press and other agencies of news, capitalism, with god at its side, is now assuming control of art, music, the movies, radio, book publishing, and all other means of disseminating information to the adult mind. Having already secured economic and political control of the earth, they are determined to secure brain control—to own the minds of the people from birth to death.

Not only does the ruling class propose to put the fear of god into the minds of the workers and their children; not only does it finance religious propaganda more liberally than ever before, but it is doing more than that to insure the future ignorance of the American people. Money is withheld from educational institutions which teach more science than theology. Teachers who show the slightest tendency to develop an individuality of thought, either in themselves or in their pupils, are being dismissed from service. Already in a half-dozen States laws have been passed forbidding the teaching of that branch of science which most openly clashes with all religious faith. Evolution has been made illegal as a subject for discussion and some States expressly state, in the laws intended to suppress scientific instruction, that "nothing shall be taught which conflicts with the story of creation as told in the Book of Genesis." As two conflicting stories of creation are set forth by Genesis and as nothing shall be taught which conflicts with either one, the Tennessee lawmakers and others have forbidden the reading of Genesis, as well as the teaching of evolution. A strict interpretation of the law would find teachers who read Genesis to their pupils as guilty as John T. Scopes.

This bold and open effort to suppress the knowledge of the modern scientific world and in its place give to the youth of our time the myths and legends of the ignorant, unwashed, half-naked, barbarians of from two to five thousand years ago is all financed and thoroughly organized. A dozen or more States will be asked to pass similar laws during the next year. The old battle between science and religion, which some of you had thought over and won by the scientists 50 years ago, is to be refought in the twentieth century. Ideas that belong to the ox-cart age of civilization will be broadcasted over the radio. Arguments that were discarded before printing presses were invented will be revived and published in modern newspapers. Miracle stories which were disbelieved by all the contemporaries of the alleged miracle workers will be remodeled and taught in the schools in place of geology. Your children will be studying the map of the New Jerusalem in place of astronomy. History will be taught with special reference to the acts of the apostles. Physiology will be revised to teach that rabbits lay eggs, that the hare has not a divided hoof but chews the cud, and that the bat is a bird. Geography will have to revise its maps in accordance with the flat-earth theory held by all the sanctified sons of god in past ages.

You may say that all this is absurd, and that not even the most ignorant preacher is so stupid as to believe that he can thus turn back the intelligence of the world 4,000 years. But they do believe it is possible to thus force their ideas on the public. They have passed many laws toward that end. They are prepared to wage a battle in every legislature in every State to attain their ends; and they expect to be victorious. They may not carry their teachings to such absurd lengths as I have indicated. They may not burn people at the stake or hang them as witches because they are teaching and publishing scientific truths. But they will blacklist them, starve them, and cut them off from the opportunity to use their knowledge for the benefit of humanity.

As soon as man ceases to depend on a god to help him, he begins to devise ways and means of helping himself. As soon as he learns that there is no god to hurt him, he begins to lose his fear of priests and politicians; as soon as he realizes there is no god to reward him for his sufferings, he desires to abolish suffering and reward himself of the god idea, he has a cleaner brain, more of making something of himself and of the world he had before.

Man has done countless things which no god hands and feet were insufficient to do the bidden. He invented the machine. He was not satisfied made a boat. He was not satisfied to stay so he made a submarine. He was not satisfied so he made the automobile; when his mind opened a plane. He has made machines to make his transport him from place to place; do his writing, earth with the speed of light. He has made and turned the desert into a fertile garden. He and made them better and more useful. He and made them large and pleasant to the taste, bitter fruits and made them large, sweet, and lush to think for him. There is no limit to the desire, is no limit to what he may sometime accomplish.

We are told by the book of Genesis that God, his work good, and rested. He was satisfied. The ape, is never satisfied, never content. He never improvements. Man, himself the product of a further evolution of all useful forms of life, is a sign of the unfit. He is helping organic evolution, the forces of nature.

Only the mud men and the gods are ever sad.

When man can do more than the gods could he any longer depend upon them? Man made destroy his god. When he has destroyed his material and social system, he will have as a result than any god ever made.

Dear Sir:

RE: BREKID

There is being transmitted herewith a letter written to Mr. [redacted] dated at Cleveland, Ohio, January 6, 1936, written by one [redacted] Cleveland, Ohio, requesting $1,000,000 to be paid on or before January 30, 1936 by Mr. [redacted] to Mr. [redacted] if Mr. [redacted] desired to postpone the "wrath of God upon him." b7C

It has been ascertained by the Cleveland office that this individual has sent similar letters to [redacted] Mr. Edward George Bremer, and Mr. Henry Ford. It has also been established that this man is mentally deficient. b7C

The Bureau is being furnished the above described letter for the purpose of filing same in the Technical Laboratory in the event more letters of this description are received, or inquiry is later made of the Bureau by any of the above recipients of these letters.

Very truly yours,
